Florence SDSU Study Abroad Summer 2013
A project at CSUMB to prepare students for study abroad using the LESCANT Model.

Through this preparation it appears students were able to attain a deeper degree of understanding, and find the means to express it.

Language Hippo
The title of this image is kind of an inside joke; language barrier in Japanese is 言葉かべ, which sounds an awful lot like 言葉かば, which is language hippo. I made this mistake once before and haven't forgotten it. Now, whether this particular language hippo is a clever joke (which I don't get) or someone genuinely wrote Mont instead of Mount and never corrected it, I'm not quite sure. I did think that this was an appropriate picture under the LESCANT language for the error, and also how no one seems to mind, because anyone who speaks English as a first language knows what it was supposed to be, and someone who speaks it as a second language probably doesn't notice (or care.)

About the Conference

Explore how geographic information system (GIS) technology fosters critical thinking skills and improves decision making in your institution. The Esri Education GIS Conference is an ideal forum to learn, collaborate, and get updated on all things GIS for both inside the classroom and policymaking.

Why Attend?

- Exchange experiences, ideas, and tips and tricks that worked for your colleagues.
- Get face time with the Esri Education GIS Conference experts.
- Discuss new applications, tools, skills, and research.
- Update your curriculum, teaching materials, and resources.
- Understand how to spread GIS across campus.

Who Should Attend?

Educators, administrators, researchers, librarians, and museum professionals with all levels of GIS experience.
